D.C. YOUTH TOUR 2019

Engaging the Next Generation

ROBIN FEEZER

WREA OFFICE
MANAGER AND YOUTH
TOUR COORDINATOR FOR WYOMING

*For more information about the Youth Tour
program, contact Robin
Feezer at the Wyoming
Rural Electric Association via email at rfeezer@wyomingrea.org or by phone at (307) 634-0727.*

For many teens, the Rural Electric Youth Tour is full of “firsts.” It may be the first time they left the state, flew on a plane, visited the nation’s capital or have been away from their family for an extended period of time. Even more, they are seeing and experiencing the larger world through their own eyes, rather than through their parents’ perspective. That’s the most important first, as it’s truly a “leap” to their next phase and where their journey to adulthood begins.

The idea of the Youth Tour sprang from a suggestion by then-Senator Lyndon Johnson to a national gathering of co-ops in 1957. Johnson felt youth from rural areas would benefit by visiting Washington to see first-hand how government works and gain a wider perspective through the experience. From this idea, Youth Tour evolved. The program has grown exponentially since its inception and this year we saw more than 1,900 young people participate from co-ops in 44 states. This year, Wyoming took 13 students to D.C.

CLEAN SLATE

In preparation for Youth Tour, teens learn about cooperatives, our history and grass-roots advocacy. They then travel to D.C. for a week that is interspersed with visits to many monuments and sites, including Capitol Hill. They participate in National Rural Electric Cooperative Association (NRECA) activities with Youth Tour delegations from across the country and meet a broad spectrum of co-op kids. Our program creates a safe space for teens to discover the adults they are striving to be. Teens leave behind their hometown identity and venture forward with a clean slate. Students are encouraged to stretch themselves by talking to those they wouldn’t ordinarily interact with.

A highlight of Youth Tour includes a meeting with our congressional delegation. Teens learn first-hand that their elected officials work for their hometown community. Students often have the opportunity to discuss issues with legislators, and our chaperones are always impressed with the interactions and questions asked by our students. Evening events feature national co-op partner organizations from the financial and insurance sectors and NRECA International, an organization bringing electricity to rural areas in developing countries. The evening programs challenge and inspire teens to make an impact in their communities. As conversations evolve, so too do the teens’ world view – their definition of community often changes from their hometown to a broader meaning.

I can say that nearly all teens who have participated in our Youth Tour program look back with fond memories of an educational, interesting and eventful week. Many make lifelong friends. For a few, Youth Tour is a transformational experience. Parents remark how their child returned noticeably different – more mature, more confident, with bigger goals and aspirations, and with a sense of purpose.

TAKE THE LEAP

Youth Tour is one of the most important programs that Wyoming Rural Electric Association undertakes. I am constantly impressed by the caliber of students that our co-op sponsors. Our teens are our future, and it’s looking brighter every day. I hope you will consider urging your teen to “take the leap” and join our next Youth Tour delegation.

CO-OP YOUTH

Wyoming's rural electric cooperatives are proud to support our youth, giving college scholarships and lineman scholarships. In addition, our co-ops sponsor high school students on the D.C. Youth Tour in June and Youth Leadership Camp in July.

THIS MONTH:

Kenzie Spear received a $1,000 college scholarship from High West Energy for the 2019-2020 school year.

Interested in applying for a scholarship, D.C. Youth Tour and/or Leadership Camp? Contact your local rural electric cooperative! See the insert in the center of the magazine for contact information.

WREN: Tell us about your studies and interests.

KS: In addition to studying business finance and economics I am also involved in Alpha Kappa Psi, the oldest business fraternity at the University of Wyoming, and I helped co-found Phi Beta Lambda, the collegiate level of the Future Business Leaders of America, at the University of Wyoming where I am currently the chapter president.

Outside of school activities, I also play women's and co-ed softball during spring and summer and love traveling around the United States as well as around the world.

WREN: How have your hometown, family and/or friends influenced you?

KS: My hometown, Cheyenne, has influenced me by providing opportunities to participate and grow, such as Junior Leadership of Laramie County, as well as volunteer opportunities to strengthen my sense of community and leadership. Cheyenne is big enough that I was able to participate in numerous activities, but it is also small enough that I made strong connections with people from all walks of life, making connections that will last a lifetime.

My friends and family have influenced me by providing ample support no matter what direction I went in. They picked me up when I fell down, had my back when I needed it most, and followed me down every path I took, helping guide me back out when it wasn't the right path for me. I wouldn't be where I am today if they hadn't been there through all of my trials and tribulations.

WREN: What are your plans for the future?

KS: Currently I am set up to participate in an internship with Northwestern Mutual during the summer of 2019, working as a financial representative to gain experience in the field of finance. After I graduate with my degree in May 2021, I plan to start a career in finance and eventually work my way up to becoming the chief financial officer of a company.

See the insert in the center of this magazine for contact information.

Niobrara Electric Association's 74th annual meeting in Lusk on May 16 was an exciting event. With more members in attendance than were expected, co-op employees moved quickly to set up extra tables and nearly ran out of food.

There was an increase in participation from the crowd as speakers came to the stage and a new director was named to the board.

Neal Wurdeman was elected to represent Niobrara's District 2 with 92 votes, he defeated contenders Kevin Baars; who received 64 votes, and Bryan Brunch; who received 44 votes. Wurdeman will replace Kenny DeGering, who resigned.

For the second year, Niobrara welcomed guest speaker Kim Christensen, general manager of the Nebraska Rural Electric Association. Christiansen motivated members to get involved with their co-op and focus on electing board members who have their best interest in mind. She also warned members about phone scams that target co-op members.

Service awards were given to longtime employees: Chris Rejda for 30 years, Twyla Barker for 25 years, and Julie Hageman and Charles Kleinberg for 5 years.

2019 WYOMING ROAD TRIP PLAYLIST

FROM THE WYOMING ARTS COUNCIL

Hours driving across vast plains must be accompanied by some seriously engaging tunes. The Wyoming Arts Council has put together a playlist for Wyoming adventures.

These musicians represent some of the best the Wyoming independent music scene has to offer. From the indie-folk-meets-rock-band style of The Woodpile, to the experimental sound designs of Crep2oose, to Aaron Davis' unconventional Americana, there's something for all tastes.

The 2019 Wyoming Road Trip Playlist is a partnership between the Wyoming Arts Council and the Wyoming Office of Tourism.

AVOID THE STING: WEST NILE VIRUS PREVENTION

FROM THE WYOMING DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

West Nile virus may be off to an earlier than usual start in Wyoming this year, with the state's first case involving a Campbell County adult reported in early June.

"Wyoming residents should take steps to protect themselves and their families from mosquito bites," said Clay Van Houten, Infectious Disease Epidemiology Unit manager with the Wyoming Department of Health (WDH). Mosquitos spread West Nile virus when they feed on infected birds and then bite people, animals or other birds.

"In past years, we typically haven't seen cases reported until late in July or August," Van Houten said. "We don't think this early case necessarily means we're in for a tough season, but we want people to know they should protect themselves."

Van Houten said most people infected with West Nile virus don't have symptoms. Among those who become ill, symptoms include fever, headache, body aches, skin rash and swollen lymph nodes. A very small number develop West Nile neuroinvasive disease with symptoms such as severe headache, fever, neck stiffness, stupor, disorientation, coma, tremors, convulsions and paralysis.

FIVE D'S OF WEST NILE VIRUS PREVENTION

1) DAWN and 2) DUSK: Mosquitos prefer to feed at dawn or dusk, so avoid spending time outside during these times.

4) DRAIN: Mosquitos breed in shallow, stagnant water. Reduce the amount of standing water by draining and/or removing.

3) DRESS: Wear shoes, socks, long pants and a long-sleeved shirt outdoors. Clothing should be light-colored and made of tightly woven materials.

5) DEET: Use an insect repellent containing DEET (N, N-diethyl-m-toluamide). When using DEET, be sure to read and follow label instructions. Other insect repellents such as Picaridin (KBR 3023) or oil of lemon eucalyptus can also be effective.

HALL OF FAME HONORS 47, ANNOUNCES WYOMING COWBOY & COWGIRL LEGACY WEEK

Wheatland Rural Electric Association board member Jack Finnerty is among 47 honorees in the 2019 Wyoming Cowboy Hall of Fame. "It's quite an honor," Finnerty said.

The induction ceremony will be at the Casper Events Center September 22.

Formed for exclusively historical, cultural, literary and educational purposes, the Hall of Fame seeks to preserve ranching history by collecting stories, photographs and artifacts. The group has honored 283 people since 2014.

This year's induction ceremony will take place during Wyoming Cowboy and Cowgirl Legacy Week, which is the third calendar week in September. The legacy week was passed into law in Wyoming this year after a successful lobbying effort by the Wyoming Cowboy Hall of Fame.

WYOMING TRIVIA

The Wyoming State Capitol building reopened with fanfare on July 10 after a massive restoration project. The Capitol Square Project was undertaken to restore some of the Capitol's original features, along with updates to the structure, utilities and overall health of the building, the Herschler Building, and the square block in which they stand. The Capitol has undergone work before in its 133-year history.

Legislature authorizes construction of the Capitol Building. David W. Gibbs & Company, Architects, is commissioned to draw plans and specifications. Adam Feick & Brothers construction company breaks ground on building site.

Cornerstone laid with a time capsule containing maps and other papers. During the Centennial of the Capitol in 1987 the cornerstone was opened and the original documents were replaced with contemporary versions.

East and west wings for the House and Senate were completed.

1890

WYOMING STATE CAPITOL HISTORY

1917

New, larger House and Senate chambers were built to relieve crowding.

A renovation project was completed. Work included stripping and staining woodwork, painting walls, replacing the wooden floor beams and modernizing the wiring, heating, plumbing and air conditioning.

1980

Capitol Square renovation project begins, with JE Dunn Construction as construction manager and HDR Architecture, Inc. as the design and preservation team.

New restaurants, new venues, new ideas coming to historic downtown Cheyenne

The historic asbestos fire curtain in the Atlas Theatre was repaired, touched up and encapsulated in 2019 at a cost of $24,000.

Cheyenne's downtown neighborhood isn't entirely what it used to be—and that's a good thing. Historic buildings are being revived or rebuilt to accommodate government offices and new business, 24 of which have opened their doors here in the last three years. Downtown Cheyenne is experiencing a revitalization that is enticing more people to take a second look at the Magic City's historic core.

THE TIVOLI

ELLIS

ROMAN
KISSES,

BY ELIZABETH SAMPSON

New businesses are filling empty spaces, new restaurants are filling bellies and community events are filling the calendar. Creative solutions for downtown are the focus of Cheyenne's Downtown Development Authority (DDA) with executive director Vicki Dugger at the helm. She came on board just over a year ago with experience as the director of the Oregon Downtown Development Association.

"I took this job because I saw downtown was ready to go," Dugger said. "All it needed was a little pull and a little push at the same time. I have a good feel for when a town is ready and what is the tipping point for that downtown. I really felt like this downtown was at that tipping point."

Currently the DDA has multiple strategies to make downtown viable. Those ideas are as simple as filling planters with flowers and installing new trash cans – and as complicated as helping business owners get through the red tape of turning their building's upper stories into apartments. They are playing match-maker between available spaces and businesses who want to open downtown, and they are trying to develop shopping clusters where similar businesses open near to one another. This encourages people to park once and shop in multiple locations.

"I think there has always been a great interest in making downtown happen, but I think all the pieces to weave a beautiful downtown are coming together now," said Alane West, president of the board of directors of the DDA.

Several big projects are in the works that confirm Dugger's analysis that the neighborhood is ready for change. Former candidate for Wyoming governor, Sam Galeotos, just opened a large restaurant called The Metropolitan Downtown at 1701 Carey Ave.

"We're really hoping it has a very positive effect on downtown and all the existing business," said Katy Rinne, director of marketing and business development for OMI Group, the management company for The Metropolitan Downtown. "We would love downtown to be a dining and entertainment-focused area of Cheyenne, and I think we can absolutely add to that."

Galeotos grew up in Cheyenne, and when he returned to Cheyenne after spending time working in cities around the world, he was sad to see that Cheyenne had lost many of its core downtown businesses.

"He came back to Cheyenne and realized there was just something missing with downtown," Rinne said.

He decided to do something about it, and has worked to improve the entire corner of 17th Street and Carey Avenue. The Metropolitan Downtown is in the corner location and offers New American Cuisine.

Right next door to the east will be an event space called The Gallery at the Met, and to the north on Carey is their boutique liquor store called Provisions, which opened in early 2018.

All three buildings required extensive renovations, though they tried to preserve as much original character as possible. In the restaurant, which was built in the 1930s in an Art Deco and Art Moderne style, they preserved the original terrazzo floors, and referenced old photos to return the front of the building to a more original look. The Gallery was built in the early 1900s and at one time housed Arp & Hammond Hardware Store. They took off two layers of facade to uncover the original brick, restored the original hardwood floors and reused the original tin ceiling tiles.

Other historic downtown buildings are getting a new shot at life as well, including two theaters in the process of renovating or revitalizing.

The Lincoln Theater, which had a long history as a movie theater at 1615 Central Ave., is prepping to become a live music venue.

Jon and Renee Jelinek have opened several businesses in historic downtown Cheyenne, and now they are working to make the Lincoln one of the premier venues along the Front Range. Renee wrote in an email that they are bringing in a top-notch sound system and working with national booking agents to bring in big-name shows that have never had a space to perform in Wyoming.

“We are really excited to give Cheyenne access to see artists that they thought they would never get the chance to see,” she said. “We really want to help make Cheyenne a better place to live so that our young people don’t want to leave as soon as they graduate.”

Though the theater is still in its renovations phase, the Jelineks are no strangers to updating old downtown buildings. In 2013 they purchased the Paramount Cafe at 1607 Capital Ave., which was a struggling coffee shop that had been opened in the lobby of the former movie theater. The theater’s auditorium was destroyed by fire in 1981. They improved the business, and went on to purchase the entire Paramount building and the Majestic building next door in 2015.

“We wanted to ensure the cafe always had a home, and we had an idea to renovate the upper floors that had been sitting vacant for almost 30 years,” Jelinek said.

They opened office spaces in the building’s upstairs, and in 2017 added a craft cocktail lounge, the Paramount Ballroom, next to the coffee shop.

“We definitely feel like downtown is at a tipping point, and we are going to see more and more businesses come in,” Jelinek said. “We want to see downtown become the gathering place for Cheyenne as it once was.”

Cheyenne’s Atlas Theatre, home to live stage productions, is undergoing an extensive $300,000 restoration. From painting the building’s facade at 211 W. Lincolnway to fixing the roof and adding air conditioning, the theater is getting many updates.

Originally built in 1887, the Cheyenne Little Theatre Players (CLTP) use it to stage the Old Fashioned Melodrama each summer during Cheyenne Frontier Days as well as other productions throughout the year. A committee of the CLTP, the Friends of the Atlas (FOTA) formed in 2016 and is in charge of the restoration.

According to Wayne Hansen of the FOTA, their goal goes beyond the current restoration to educating the community about the theater and securing funds to maintain and preserve the building.

“Some buildings get torn down because their value is not worth the cost and effort to sustain them,” Hansen wrote in an email. “Preserving a historic icon like the Atlas Theatre never ends. There will always be new tasks to tackle.”

Future plans include putting up a blade sign, marquee, new lighting and electronic poster windows. They are also looking at ways to restore the deteriorated second and third floors.

Members of the public have the chance to see the restoration either by attending a stage production or by joining the periodically scheduled behind-the-scenes tours offered through the box office. W

POLLINATION OBSERVATION

Taking a nature walk in town can be quite exciting! Squirrels, cottontails, raccoons, deer, foxes, coyotes and birds all live in towns, though you may have to take an early morning walk to see them. But the group of animals that is easiest to find and observe is also the most diverse group – insects!

A great place to observe insects is in a garden, where pollinating insects are busy sipping nectar and gathering pollen – it's easy to get close, because they are so intent on their tasks. To identify the insect, look at the eyes and antennae, estimate the size, count the wings (this can be tricky!) and look for hair and pollen.

HERE'S A QUICK GUIDE TO A FEW OF THE COMMON POLLINATING INSECTS:

FLIES

have two wings, big eyes that almost touch and very short antennae. Many adult flies sip nectar and some are very good pollinators.

|||||||

have four wings and are smooth and shiny. Nearly all wasps are hunters that provide meat (such as spiders and insects) for their larvae, though the adults like nectar. Pollen wasps, however, collect pollen for their offspring, just like bees.

|||||||

have four wings and are usually hairy. Females collect pollen on their legs or under their abdomens.

TYPES OF BEES:

HONEY BEES

are medium-sized gold and black bees. If there's a hive nearby, these bees will be very common. They collect nectar and pollen; they are the only bee that makes a lot of honey.

|||||||

are fat, fuzzy, and various combinations of black, yellow and orange. The big queens come out in early spring; the smaller, summer bumblebees are the queen's daughters. Bumblebees live in nests, usually in the ground, with hundreds of siblings.

|||||||

LEAFCUTTER & MASON BEES

carry pollen under their abdomens instead of on their legs. Leafcutters have large jaws to cut leaf circles, which they use to line their cavity nests.

|||||||

SWEAT BEES

are small but abundant. Some have metallic colors, but most are dark. They are called sweat bees because they are attracted to sweat, which they drink for the salts.

HOW MANY KINDS OF INSECTS CAN YOU FIND ON YOUR WALK?

HOME ON THE RANGE

milk & honey

BY GINA SIGEL

I am convinced that no one on earth appreciates the beautiful summers as much as a Wyoming native. After a long winter and potentially dicey spring, the weather in summer feels like paradise.

he basic elements of our state – mountains, pastures, agriculture – become extraordinary. My neighbors, some of whom raise bees and dairy cows and goats have me asking myself this time of year, "Is this the land of milk and honey?"

Those bees and cows must feel like it's paradise, too. It's the peak of the season and abundance is everywhere: from the blue skies and sunshine to the tall grass that hasn't started to turn crispy in the peak of the summer heat. The wildflowers in the mountains are in full glory and the gift keeps giving, turning nectar and grass into bounty that we can enjoy well into the fall and winter seasons that will follow. Thankfully, that feels a long way off.

When it comes to milk and honey products in particular, the harvest continues for most of the lifespan of the animals and insects. In fact, a hive could theoretically survive indefinitely and a cow can live to almost 20 years, though most dairy cows are culled around 5 to 8 years. Given that an average cow produces 350,000 glasses of milk in her lifetime and the average bee colony produces 60-100 pounds of honey per year, there is enough to go around. And around. And around.

I am not a bee expert but I turned to my neighbor for some knowledge. My kids recently helped her with tasks as a keeper and were delighted to learn through hands-on experience. They are fascinated by the hives and behavior and, of course, all things honey. As in, the 25 cent honey sticks they beg me to buy every time we are at the farmers' market.

Approximately a third of the food we eat is thanks to bee pollination. Beeswax is in furniture polish, cosmetics and medicines. When it comes to our daily lives, bees are worthy of much credit, including health and happiness. The term

Given that an average cow produces 350,000 glasses of milk in her lifetime and the average bee colony produces 60-100 pounds of honey per year, there is enough to go around.

And around. And around.

"honeymoon" refers to the ancient tradition of giving a newly married couple a month's supply of honey mead, the world's oldest fermented beverage, for happiness and fertility. However, when it comes to romance, bees have an interesting point of view.

Worker bees are all female. Anyone who lives in rural Wyoming can appreciate that dynamic. Only the queen reproduces, and she goes on a mating quest once in her lifetime and stores the semen to be used throughout her lifespan. The various drones who mate with the queen die after mating. Life for them is anything but a walk in the park.

After all that work, each bee only produces about 1/12 teaspoon of honey in its lifetime. But the whole is greater than the sum of its parts. In fact, that is true of both honey and dairy and it takes the dedication of the beekeepers and dairy farmers to keep it flowing seamlessly.

Some statistics say cows are more valuable for milk than they are for beef. They produce over 6 gallons of milk per day and the host of products made from this milk includes yogurt, ice cream, cheese and butter. How much milk it takes for each of these foods varies, ranging from 1 gallon of milk to make 1 gallon of yogurt to over 2 1/2 gallons for 1 pound of butter. It's not just about the basic product. It's about making the basic product delightful.

Sometimes the delightful can even be exotic. Trendy and delicious products include goat milk ice cream and sheep milk cheese. In Tibet, yak butter, or porcha, is a popular commodity used to flavor coffee. While yak farms haven't caught on here in cowboy country, goats and sheep seem as content as they can be in the lush summer pastures.

Recently, my kids asked for a glass of warm milk and honey before bed. Obviously, these products, and perhaps this lifestyle, serve as more than just a pretty phrase on paper or a pastoral scene of grass and flowers in the fields. If bread and water can easily become tea and toast, I'll take mine with a little milk and honey. W

THE ALTERNATE COMPASS

A CRAFT COURSE ON AN IRONHORSE

DESCRIPTION BY PIECE OF CAKE MARKETING

Steve A. Anderson's The Alternate Compass – A Craft Course on an Ironhorse does away with Route 66 and the Pacific Coast Highway, instead empowering readers to ride a unique 21-stage journey and explore America at their own pace. Anderson has already driven the length of the routes he created and, in his new book, engrosses readers in the breathtaking scenery, fascinating history and nightly trips to an eclectic array of microbreweries; experiences that could only be had on less-travelled roads. Readers can now follow in his footsteps.

Looking back on his epic 21,000-mile motorcycle adventure across the United States, Steve A. Anderson is full to the brim with memories of quirky history, scenery that looks like it walked out of a movie and some of the best microbrews any beer lover could dream of. But, strangely enough, none of this came from visiting places that are well and truly on the map.

The Alternate Compass – A Craft Course on an Ironhorse is chock-full of ideas for weekend getaways, week-long escapes from reality of even large-scale, multi-week biker pilgrimages. And the best bit? They'll wind up in a different microbrewery every evening!

JOE SHOGRIN

How Could You Not?

HIGH WEST LINEMAN
VOLUNTEERS AGAIN AND AGAIN

BY DAVE SHELLES

When Joe Shogrin saw a homeless man with a wife and child on the streets of Cheyenne, he knew what he had to do.

On a cold winter night, with the wind howling and snow flying sideways, Shogrin listened to the man's story: He was traveling west across the country in search of a new opportunity, his ride headed in a different direction, he got caught in the storm without proper attire and here he was.

With Cheyenne's shelters full and sleeping on the street not an option, Shogrin said he did what he felt any empathetic human being would have done. He paid for a room at the Rodeo Inn for a week so the family could get out of the storm and get on their way.

"In all honesty, how could you not stop?" Shogrin said. "It's about humanity. What would you want done to you in that situation? You can't let someone sit there freezing, especially if he's got a family."

High West Energy Lineman Joe Shogrin descends from a training pole during his team's yearly rescue training exercise.

hat's par for the course with Shogrin, a Cheyenne-based lineman for High West Energy. He's well-known in Cheyenne's volunteer circles for contributing wherever he's needed, be it the city's recreational soccer league, running for city council, helping out with the city's mentally ill population or just in his neighborhood – all the while embracing the community-minded ethos of a lineman.

He started as a lineman in Altus, Oklahoma, around the time of the birth of his daughter, Victoria. In addition to the usual tasks, Shogrin helped his customers in any way he could, including helping them trim their trees to stay clear of the line. All in a day's work.

"As a lineman you're part of the community, so no matter what you do you serve your community," he said. "It doesn't matter if you're at work or not. I was typically by myself and I'd help a little old lady or single mom or the dad who didn't know how to use a chainsaw trim out their yard because we had a lot of trees down there – trim out a line, then I'd go back a couple hours later and take down the rest of their trees for them."

One brutally hot Oklahoma summer day, he found himself at a community celebration, toting 2-year-old Victoria. He had helped a small church organize a dunking booth in hopes of gaining membership, even spending part of the day in the booth. More than having the chance to cool off, the experience stayed with Shogrin and showed him the possibilities of volunteering and helping out in a community.

That desire to help out followed him when he moved to Cheyenne Shogrin said his daughters now help him volunteer and have forged their own paths as well. He said Victoria has embraced her faith and is active in InterVarsity campus ministry at Laramie County Community College. Grace sparked her father into helping a neighbor clean up his house while his wife received treatment for mental illness, a task that involved two shovels, gallons of bleach and two boxes of 55-gallon garbage bags – and resulted in the neighbors stayin 2010 and hired on with High West. He started coaching recreational soccer and has continued doing that; daughters Victoria, now 22, and Grace, 16, serve as his assistant coaches. Shogrin said it served as a great entree into further opportunities to help in the community.

That included helping a friend's son install bat houses on high poles for an Eagle Scout project using a bucket truck this spring. His previous experience with bats consisted of helping a neighbor remove a bat from her house during a campaign stop last year; he ran for Cheyenne City Council in Ward 3.

Two years ago he went to social media and successfully assembled a massive crew to help clean up snow-fallen trees after one of Cheyenne's early-spring snowstorms. "A fun day," he called it.

Shogrin helped another neighbor stay abreast of his bills and grocery shopping after a layoff. He organizes Cheyenne's annual Take a Kid Fishing event, in which every kid discovers the joy of fishing by catching one. And he hangs out with aging veterans at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Cheyenne.

"My type of volunteerism is to basically go around helping people in need," said Shogrin, who estimates he puts in 1,000 hours a year. "I'm not attached to an organization. If I see somebody in need, that's where I go." W

ELK TACOS WITH BBQ VEGETABLES

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--------------------------------------|
| 1 LB GROUND ELK | 1/4 TSP GROUND CAYENNE PEPPER |
| 2 TOMATOES (CUT IN HALF) | 1/4 TSP GROUND CHIPOTLE CHILI PEPPER |
| 1 ONION (RED OR WHITE, SLICED) | 1 TSP GROUND CUMIN |
| 6 GREEN ONIONS | 1 GARLIC CLOVE |
| 1/2 CUP MILD GREEN CHILIS (DICED) | OLIVE OIL |
| 6 FLOUR TORTILLAS | SALT |
| 1 CUP SHREDDED CABBAGE | 6 OZ BEER (RECOMMEND DOS |
| 4 RADISHES (SLICED) | EQUIS OR MODELO) |
| 1 TSP GARLIC POWDER | |

1. Add 1 tablespoon of olive oil and garlic clove in a skillet over medium heat. Add ground elk and cook for 5 minutes or until meat begins to brown. Add salt, garlic powder, cayenne pepper, chipotle pepper and cumin to the elk meat. Continue to stir until thoroughly cooked. Turn heat to low and add half of the beer to the elk meat.

Continue to cook on low while you BBQ your vegetables.

2. Pre-heat barbecue to high temperature.

3. Coat green onions, tomatoes, sliced onion with olive oil and salt. Place vegetables directly on the grill. Turn vegetables as needed until they become slightly charred. While cooking your vegetables, place flour or corn tortillas directly on the grill and cook for about 1 minute on each side until warm. Remove vegetables and tortillas from grill when ready.

4. Place tortilla on plate, add a heaping spoonful of elk burger, add a few red onions, green onion and cooked tomato. I like to then add a few mild green chilis, some shredded cabbage and sliced radish for the additional crunch.

SLOW COOKER BARBECUED BEEF SANDWICHES

- 1 BONELESS BEEF CHUCK ROAST (3 LBS)
 1-1/2 CUPS KETCHUP
 1/4 CUP PACKED BROWN SUGAR
 1/4 CUP BARBECUE SAUCE
 2 TBS WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE
 1/2 TSP SALT
 1/4 TSP GARLIC POWDER
 1/4 TSP PEPPER
 12 SANDWICH BUNS, SPLIT

Place roast in a 3 or 4-quart slow cooker. In a small bowl, combine the ketchup, brown sugar, barbecue sauce, Worcestershire sauce, and seasonings. Pour over beef, cover and cook on low for 8 to 10 hours or until meat is tender.

Shred beef with two forks; cook for 15 minutes or until heated through. Using a slotted spoon, place 1/2 cup on each bun. Serve with onions, pickles and jalapenos if desired.

NANCY DENK ★ RIVERTON

GRILLED SEA BASS

- FISH FILLETS (3-4 OZ PORTIONS)
 1 TSP SALT
 1/4 TSP PEPPER
 1/4 TSP PAPRIKA
 8 SLICES BACON, DIVIDED
 1 TBS PLUS 1 TSP LEMON JUICE, DIVIDED

Rinse fillets in cold water; pat dry and sprinkle with salt, pepper, and paprika. Set aside.

Place two slices bacon on a large piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil; place a bass fillet lengthwise on each bacon slice. Sprinkle 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice over each fillet. Fold foil edges over and wrap securely. Repeat procedure with remaining ingredients to make three additional packets.

Grill packets over hot coals for 10 minutes. Turn packets and grill an additional 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork.

CORRALLING HORSES

JILL LOVATO ★ CHEYENNE

I stepped out into the unconvincing morning light.
The suggestion of water and grass rose up from below;
The insistence of birdsong pierced down from above.
I almost missed it –
Corralling horses;
Dust stirs,
Muscle glides over bone,
A gate creaks,
A latch drops,
A moment surrenders to time.

OLD PAINT - OLD FRIEND

Old Paint, your days are numbered. You stand with head hung low.
Your youth still fills my memory. Your eyes still hold the glow.
Remember how we used to run? How you danced in the golden sun!
Hardly touching the ground below! A whispered word and off we'd go!
As if with wings, to mount and fly! Shoulder to the wind, head held high!

How I laughed, so long ago, to the beat of your hooves, come rain or snow!
No path too rough for your sturdy feet, no steer too fast for you to beat.
With heart and spirit beyond words, you found lost calves, you corralled the herds.
You were kind and gentle, you were good, and it seemed you always understood.
So, when you gallop off to that heavenly gate, give a pause for me, but don't you wait!

There's comin' a day, we will ride again. There's comin' a time we will fly again.
The days will seem longer when you are gone. Leaving only memories to linger on.
But, now my fine steed, stroll on up the hill. Lay yourself down among the daffodils.
Unfurl those wings, let your spirit fly. Leaving me to wave goodbye, with a tear in my eye.

'til we meet again, goodbye my old friend.

Mountain Man Rendezvous

BY ROBERT L. FOSTER

Have you ever been to a mountain man rendezvous—I mean a real down-to-earth, get dirty, no-holds-barred rendezvous? To be honest with you, none of us have.

hey happened long before any of us were born. However, some of you may have attended reenactments of those fascinating historic events which occurred between 1825 and 1840. I've enjoyed attending several reenactments in different states, but I must confess the Fort Bridger Mountain Man Rendezvous is by far my favorite. I guess that's why I eagerly join thousands of other curious visitors every Labor Day weekend. The fall weather is usually cool and pleasant; and when you step through the open gate you'll find you've eased into another world, that of the 1830s, when those rugged individualists called mountain men lived lives of incredible hardship on the chance they could make enough money from trapping and trading to survive another year. They took comfort in knowing there would be copious amounts of whiskey at the next rendezvous, maybe even some women, that is if they were darn lucky and didn't get scalped before they got there!

Jim Bridger was one of those mountain men. The pioneer sign at Fort Bridger reads, "Old Fort Bridger Pioneer Trading Post. The fort was established about 1842 by Jim Bridger, discoverer of the Great Salt Lake, notable pioneer, trapper, fur trader, scout and guide. He was born at Richmond, Virginia March 17, 1804. Died at Westport, Missouri July 17, 1881."

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

At Fort Bridger, as you browse along rows of canvas-covered vendors' shelters, Native American drums thump out a cadenced rhythm and campfire smoke wafts across the fort's quakenaspen and cottonwood tree-covered campus. Tipis dot the landscape, and in the distance you'll hear gunfire as black powder rifle shooters compete against each other. You'll rub shoulders with male and female rendezvous participants who are required to dress in period costumes predating 1840. I was intrigued at meeting a tough-looking bearded mountain man wearing a beaver skin top hat and Coke bottle eye glasses, among his other unique accoutrements. He looked rather wild with a brace of flintlock pistols in his waistband. When I struck up a conversation he told me he was a medical doctor from Minneapolis and this was his annual break from civilization – to which he would soon have to return. In fact I met several professional men taking time from their busy schedules to relish the role of transforming into "mountain men" even if only for a couple of days.

A TRUE FRIEND

One attraction at the fort which I'm invariably pulled to is the fenced monument to Thornburgh, Wyoming's most famous dog. He was just a puppy in 1879 when discovered by Army soldiers after a fight near the White River Indian Reservation in Colorado.

Participants relax along Groshon Creek.

He was named for Major T.T. Thornburgh, who had been killed in that battle. Known as the Pony Express Stable Dog, Thornburg is credited with several heroic acts, the most notable being the rescue of a young boy from a fast-flowing creek. The boy's parents were so grateful to the dog they had a special collar made for him, complete with a silver nameplate which read, "Thornburgh – For most distinguished gallantry." Sadly, Thornburgh died instantly when kicked in the side by a mule in 1888 and was buried with full military honors. His owner, Buck Buchanan, was so distraught that he purchased a marble headstone which reads, "Man never had a better truer friend. Sleep on old fellow. We'll meet across the range."

You may want to take a few moments to visit Thornburgh's fenced monument which is on the north side of the fort. I don't know why but every time I read that headstone I get a lump in my throat. I guess it's because I love good dogs!

Sometimes in my mind I'm a tough, rugged, buckskin-clad mountain man. At other times I'm just a quiet Utah city dweller (okay, okay, we can't all be from Wyoming – though my wife is from Cheyenne) frantically scurrying through city traffic to complete the errands on my day planner. But a man can be in two different places and he will be two different men. That's how it is with me. Some days I would really enjoy taking my beautifully polished .50 caliber black powder Hawkin rifle from the den wall, strapping on my pistol, calling my dog and heading for the high country. I guess the spirit of the mountain man lives on in many of us. It keeps us believing that we are free like the eagles and that somewhere the buffalo herds are beyond description, the streams are full of beaver and the pine-covered mountains stretch on forever. If you're up for a little different sort of adventure, head on over to Fort Bridger over Labor Day 2019. Maybe I'll see you there. In the meantime keep your powder dry and don't get scalped along the way. W

Discover life-changing freedom and fun

The Zinger folds to a mere 10 inches.

“With my Zinger Chair, I can go anywhere and everywhere I want!”

More and more Americans are reaching the age where mobility is an everyday concern. Whether from an injury or from the aches and pains that come from getting older—getting around isn't as easy as it used to be. You may have tried a power chair or a scooter. The Zinger is NOT a power chair or a scooter! The Zinger is quick and nimble, yet it is not prone to tipping like many scooters. Best of all, it weighs only 47.2 pounds and folds and unfolds with ease. You can take it almost anywhere, providing you with independence and freedom.

I can now go places and do things that I wasn't able to go or do before. It has given me a new lease on life and I am so happy I found it!

—Dana S., Texas

Years of work by innovative engineers have resulted in a mobility device that's truly unique. They created a battery that provides powerful energy at a fraction of the weight of most batteries. The Zinger features two steering levers, one on either side of the seat. The user pushes both levers down to go forward, pulls them both up to brake, and pushes one while pulling the other to turn to either side. This enables great mobility, the ability to turn on a dime and to pull right up to tables or desks. The controls are right on the steering lever so it's simple to operate and its exclusive footrest swings out of the way when you stand up or sit down. With its rugged yet lightweight aluminum frame, the Zinger is sturdy and durable yet convenient and comfortable! What's more, it easily folds up for storage in a car seat or trunk—you can even gate-check it at the airport like a stroller. Think about it, you can take your Zinger almost anywhere, so you don't have to let mobility issues rule your life. It folds in seconds without tools and is safe and reliable. It holds up to 275 pounds, and it goes up to 6 mph and operates for up to 8 hours on a single charge.

Why spend another day letting mobility issues hamper your independence and quality of life?

ENCOURAGE YOUR CHILD'S CURIOUS MIND

Research shows that it's a child's internal desire to learn that motivates them to seek out new experiences and discover how and why things work. They're born to be curious!
You can encourage your child's curiosity and learning in simple ways every day.

Answer their questions.

If you don't know the answer, look it up together!

Walk around your neighborhood together.

Talk about everything you see!

Play with old things in new ways.

Pretend a wooden spoon is a microphone and make up a song!

Ask open-ended questions.

Give them time to think and come up with their own answer!

Let them try doing things on their own.

Even if it makes a mess!

Take field trips to the library.

Read, read, read - there's always something new to learn!

Allow time for boredom.

Quiet time stimulates wonder!
